Ellen Terry's First Part.

The foremost English actress of our times, Ellen Terry, who last year celebrated her jubilee that marked the completion of fifty triumphant years, has written a charming autobiography. McClure's Magazine is the fortunate publisher and will present from time to time portions of it dealing with separate events. The first part, "Memories of My Childhood," appears in the June McClure's, and we quote from this Terry's account of her first appearance on April 28, 1856, as "Mamlin" in the Keans' London production of "A Winter's Tale."

There is something, I suppose, in a woman's nature which always makes her remember how she was dressed at any especially eventful moment of her life, and I can see myself as though it were yesterday, in the little red and silver dress I wore as Mamlin. Mrs. Griever the dressmaker—"Peter Griever" as we children called her—had pulled me into my very pink tights (they were very tight according to the picture of me), and my mother had arranged my hair in sausage curls on each side of my head in even more perfect order and regularity than usual. Besides my clothes I had a beautiful "property" to be proud of. This was a go-cart which had been made in the theatre by Mr. Bradshaw, and was an exact copy of a child's toy as depicted on a Greek vase. It was my duty to drag this little cart about the stage, and on the first night when Mrs. Keans as Leontea told me to "go play," I obeyed her instructions with such vigor that I tripped over the handle and came down on my basket. A titter ran through the house, and I felt that my career as an actress was ruined forever. Bitter and envious were the tears I shed, but the little incident, so mortifying to me, did not spoil my first appearance altogether. The Times, May 1, 1856, was kind enough to call me "vivacious and precocious," and a worthy relative of my sister Kate, and my parents were pleased (although they were not) to show it too much), and Mrs. Keans gave me a pat on the back. Father and Kate were both in the queue, too, I ought to have said, and the Queen, Prince Albert, and the Princess Royal were all in a box on the first night.

Where are we if people will go on inventing like this? Next, perhaps, we shall find Mr. Dines and Mr. Shaw between them inventing a machine that will forecast the weather, and so disestablish the whole meteorological office. A sort of penny-in-the-slot arrangement, where you will put in your coin, and the weird thing will tell you what sort of weather it is to be next Monday. Such people require to be looked after.—The London Telegraph.

Italy Protests.

Her Anarchistic South American Friend of Peace.

The Hague, June 19.—A private meeting of the chiefs of the delegations to the Peace Conference has approved the proposal that the following preside over the respective commissions named: M. Leon Victor Bourgeois, France, arbitrator; Count Vergano di Torrelli, Italy, rights of neutrals; Prof. de Maarten, Russia, usages of war.

It is understood that the secretary has received a formal request from Italy that a member of one Central American delegation be excluded from the conference, alleging that he, a Neapolitan by birth, has by writing to Paris encouraged the Anarchist propaganda in Italy.

HAYWOOD LETTERS IN

Was in Plot to Trick Mrs. Orchard, It is Declared

HUSBAND'S DOINGS SECRET

When His Wife Asked Him Whereabouts Notes Were Sent to Deceive Her—Orchard Again on Stand.

Boise, June 19.—With Harry Orchard recalled to the stand, first to be formally prepared by the defense for impeachment, and then to be indirectly examined, the state produced yesterday morning a number of letters written by the witness and one of the prisoners, Haywood, the purpose of which was to show that there had been a conspiracy to deceive Mrs. Orchard of Gripple Creek as to the whereabouts of Orchard in the spring and summer of 1905.

The defense vigorously protested against the introduction of the matter on re-direct examination, but the court ruled that if it was improper on re-direct he would permit the state to reopen its examination.

Orchard swore that Haywood said in the spring of 1905 that Mrs. Orchard was repeatedly writing to him as to Orchard's whereabouts, and Orchard suggested that he write her a series of letters, date them at San Francisco, and have them delivered through agents of the Western Federation of Miners. Two were thus written, and the state produced them, secured after his admission. Then one was written, dated at Nome, Alaska, and given to Marion Moore, then an organizer for the Western Federation of Miners, to take to Alaska and mail. The state produced the letter, and over objections secured its admission.

Next the state produced a letter written by Haywood himself, to Mrs. Orchard, showing that the prisoner had knowledge of the Alaskan story and this, too, was admitted in evidence. Orchard also testified that the replica of Mrs. Orchard were sent to him through Haywood.

The impeaching questions propounded by the defense all indicated a purpose by the defense to show that at various times Orchard threatened to kill Stuenkel, because of a desire to be re-venged for the loss of Orchard's interest in the Hercules mine.

WIND PRESSURE.

Some Matters That Affect Our Aerial Progress.

Mr. Stanton and Mr. Bairstow have made some experiments at the National Physical Laboratory which bring out a new and practically very valuable fact—namely, that pressure is not the same on large surfaces as on small experimental models. If, for example, a given wind velocity is brought to bear on a square foot of surface it will be 18 per cent, less per square foot of surface. It was demonstrated, too, that this relation is constant for flat forms, however complicated. A builder or engineer who knows that a structure may be exposed to a wind of eighty miles per hour and that the pressure per square foot as determined by model is, say, 5 pounds, should allow for his larger construction 20 per cent, extra. The reason for this seems to be the more thoroughly reduced pressure on the lee side of a larger area. And this reminds us—

Many years ago the Royal Meteorological society arranged an exhibition of apparatus for measuring wind velocities. It was an extraordinary assortment of instruments, of which one only, and that a purely empirical design, seemed to achieve the object—the well-known Robinson's hemispherical cup, invented by a clergyman. So everybody made up his mind that the thing could be done scientifically. Straightway Mr. Dines, F. R. S., went and did it. It is that fair to your colleagues to go and do a thing which they have voted impossible? Mr. Dines has been "at it" again lately, and in this race, we believe, Mr. W. N. Shaw, the meteorological director, is in the conspiracy.

The remarkable instrument, the barometer, is subject to curious fluctuations, apart from the ordinary steady rise and fall, little undulations caused by sudden changes and by such simple things as the presence of a cloud over the locality. These oscillations are so minute that nobody ever thought that they could be indicated on a barograph—the chart which records the movements of the mercurial column. Nobody, that is to say, but Mr. Dines, who, at the instigation of Dr. Shaw, has invented a strange piece of mechanism, which actually does register these minute variations—the "microbarograph" of the barometric chart, as the director calls them—and so produce a microbarograph.

Where are we if people will go on inventing like this? Next, perhaps, we shall find Mr. Dines and Mr. Shaw between them inventing a machine that will forecast the weather, and so disestablish the whole meteorological office. A sort of penny-in-the-slot arrangement, where you will put in your coin, and the weird thing will tell you what sort of weather it is to be next Monday.
